Eliminating Communists and their sympathizers from labor union leadership has been a long struggle, and the end is not in sight. But victories here and there, almost all on the anti-Red side, have amounted to real progress.

The latest was in Chicago where the Farm Equipment Workers Union voted to disaffiliate with the United Electrical Workers and merge with the United Automobile Workers of the CIO.

The Farm Equipment Union and the UEW were kicked out of the CIO is 1949 for refusing to get rid of their "party line"

The only effective ways to rid a labor union of leaders who are Reds or fellow travelers are to persuade the members themselves to do the job, or to offer them ample opportunity to affiliate with democratic unions.

This action in Chicago, and others like it, demonstrate that it can be done.

The Offshore Islands

Despite the obviously politically-inspired statements of several United States Senators about the offshore islands between the Chinese mainland and Formosa, the administration approach to a definitely sensitive problem is not one that should be hurried by the loud speaking of some members of Congress.

In just a few days Red China is sending a 39-member delegation to New Delhi to attend what has been termed an "unofficial" conference of Asian countries.

From this conference may come a hint as to what role Premier Chou En-lai will play at the official 30-nation Asian-African conference in Indonesia in mid-April, and some of our observers of the Far Eastern scene are speculating whether the Chinese performances at New Delhi and Bandoeng may be timed to coincide with attacks on Quemoy and Matsu.

People Should Know Which Half Of Book Is Good Half

You don't hear it as much as you used to, but a descriptive term chief executive develop his plan of inter- that always commanded a good deal of respect and envy from me is When I started to write about that just now the thought suddenly > came to me that maybe "well-read" was another of those home-grown expressions indigenous to the locality where I spent my childhood and not in common use anywhere else. You know, that panicky feeling that perhaps something you've been doing for years is one of those things that just aren't done? "Well-read" docsn't look very good under close scrutiny. It has the carmarks of having been coined by some backwoods Winchell whose working supply of words was pretty limited. But I see it's in the dictionary and that it means what I always thought it meant, same as back in Kansas

-"having read much, as in some field of knowledge or interest." My own definition was a triffe narrower "having read a lot of books." I have always thought it would be nice to be well-read but, being a slow reader, I don't figure I'll ever make it.

I am what you might call medium-resti --- a little on the mediumrare side. I read quite a few books but a great many more half-books. I would like to have a nickel for every book I am half through reading but haven't finished yet. This type of reading is very frustrating. A man could live to a hunderd without knowing how a lot of things came out. The exasperating part is that it's no use to go back and find out. By the time a medium-read reader gets around to reading the last half of a book he has forgotten what was in the first half. And by the time he reviews the first half he has to put the book aside again without having gained an Inch.

More than once I have made a point of returning to one of those mystery thrillers some people say they can't lay down. Sometimes the corner of a page is turned down to indicate just where I left off reading and I go on from there to the end. I find out who done it, all right, but I can't remember what

It occurs to me, though, that really well-read people may have wasted a good deal of valuable time. I notice that many of the books I read clear through are good at the beginning but peter out toward part I read but surely must get better - else nobody would have

It would be very helpful if a person could know in advance which half of the book is the good half.

According to these Iron Curtain experts, the Kremlin has no intention of settling this eightyear-old problem. If that were no need for Raab to go to Russia. An agreement could be reached has been deliberated at more than 250 different parleys and meetings, and it has been ready to be signed for several years.

Real purpose of the Reds' sudden maneuver is to provide propaganda for their latest "peace drive" against rearming West Germany and against the U.S. in the explosive Formosa crisis,

It is highly significant, and not accidental, that Raab's visit to Moseow will coincide with a momwhich the Communists will play les a leading role. This is the Afro-Asian conference at Bandung, April 18, the first of its kind in mod ern history, Red China and North Vietnam will attend, but the U.S. Britain, France and Russia have not been invited.

It is definitely known the Communists will demand that the conference officially condemn U. S. policy regarding Matsu and Quemoy Islands and Formosa.

At the same time this propaganda attack is taking place in the Far East, the Kremlin will use the Ranb discussions to stage similar "peace" hoopla for the benefit of Europe. But the new accord that will be offered him will be heavily booby-trapped.

Banker Sees No Danger In Mortgage Debt

By DAVID G. BAREUTHER

Is IT BAD to own a house? Rerent testimony of bankers and other economists viewing with alarm such things at "too liberal financing," "a national mortgage debt that is too high," and "dangers of over-production of housing" may have made you wonder. But apparently all hankers aren't anxious to make it more difficult for people to buy new houses. One stood up at a meeting of savings bank presidents and "I was brought up to consider it a fine thing for a family to own its home. Is that bad?"

He was George C. Johnson, head of the Dime Savings Bank of Brooklyn, which boasts of holding more home mortgages than any other institution of its kind.

"The long-term self-amortizing mortgage with low down payment has proved the greatest single factor in putting good homes within the reach of families in every income bracket," he said, "Is this

The story of his leadership, in Britain's darkest as well as her finest hours, is too well known, is being too widely published today, to need recounting here.

When Winston Churchill was not actively engaged in trying to change the course of the river of time he studied its passing events with an intentness which eventually brought him prescience. He became "the man of the half-century." He was a man produced by his time, With the single failing that he could not accept the end of old imperial ways, he was attuned to his time. Yet by time he is subdued.

Just Between Us

-By Bobby Westbrook

Since Randy gave a perfectly adequate review of the AAUW play the other night, there's -really no need to elaborate on it. Except to add my heart-felt adpairation. It was given under circumstances that would try the stoutest actor.

In the first place, the audience was composed of people who knew the actors well, Therefore, the immediate reaction on seeing Sandra James as a peasant boy with long underwear in place of tights, on seeing Madelon Powers in a full beard was surprise and

Which made it all the more remarkable that both the surprise and the amusement was swiftly overcome by the enchantment of -the play itself. When Cuthbert whistled up the wind to blow Mardi Martin whirling away, you got an eerie prickling down your spine, despite the fact that you know full weil that the wind came from an electric fan or the floor in plain view.

Well, they were wonderful, and the audience left in a glow that should carry them all through the week. The costumes were ingenious and very effective, the lighting simple but also effective. And the only pity about the whole thing is that it was a one-night performance, before an audience that filled the room up to and including the window sills, but still too small.

With a proper invitation, I'll bet they could be persuaded to take the show on the roads, and if it's within driving distance there are a lot of people who would like to see it all over again.

And I - well, I'll settle happily for one glimpse, however brief, of the glorious Taj Mahal. That's been my one goal since I was old enough to be charmed by Richard Halliburton's "Royal Road to Romance" and "The Glorious Adventure,"

You can keep the Golden Gate . . the Sphinx . . . Cleopatra's Needle . . . and the Great Wall of China, all to yourself. But give me, please the exotic monument to a much-loved queen, with its carved marble as sheer as lace, encrusted with gems. And somewhere, in the background, while I feast my eyes, let me hear Amy Woodford Finden's -- "Pale Hands I loved beside the Shalimar." THAT is my idea of something very close to heaven!

Just when Edna will get around the world, I haven't any idea. And certainly I haven't started to pack. But Margaret LaBar's dream may be only a brief year away. Already she's singing "California Here I Come" - and with sound reason. Not only did our Maggie win the $50 for being the first department head to pass the quota, but she came away with the additional $100 for heading the department that passed the quota by the greatest percentage. Her colleagues profited to, of course-to the tune of several days of additional vacation.

Maybe since I can't see the Taj Mahal this year . . . or next . or maybe even within this decade or the next, I should settle happily for the Wyckoff excursion to Madison Square Garden and "The Greatest Show on Earth," on Monday, April 18th. Certainly it will lift one right out of the humdrum world of every day and place him on a separate little planet beyond all reach of the ordinary cares. Did you know that Emmett Kel-

Garden by being married there, under the Big Top?-his third try, I believe, at finding happiness after a life that has been strangely sad and lonely. Just when those wedding bells will ring-or if they already have-I'm not sure. But in any case, don't wish Mr. Kelly luck. That word is poison to a circus performer. Simply tell him you hope they both break their legs-and they'll prosper as merrily as any truly fine artist and his wife should do!
